Bands will battle it out for teen charity cause

By Olivia Ryan

Rockers from all over County Louth are set to take part in a Battle of the Bands that could help launch them on the road to stardom and provide much needed funds for a charity helping teens in trouble.

The competition, to be held at the Sprit Store in Dundalk on Monday March 30th at 8pm, is being organised by a group of students from Dundalk Institute of Technology.

The prize for the winners is a full day's recording in Tumbleweed Studio, worth hundreds of euro. The winning band will also watch their own CDs being produced and printed for free.

Five bands are to face off against each other in the contest. One Ear, The Dirty 9's, Stop Go Tokyo, The Rapport, Sungun are the five bands been selected to battle it out.

But, just as importantly, all the proceeds from the night will go towards Teen Line Ireland – a free and anonymous phone counselling and listening service for teenagers in trouble all over the country.
